Bend Planning Commission Reference Guide

This document is a short introduction to the Planning Commission for Neighborhood Districts.

Mission and Scope

The Planning Commission is a volunteer organization that largely provides recommendations to the Bend City Council on amendments to the Bend Comprehensive Plan and the Bend Development Code. In those cases, the City Council makes the final decision. The Planning Commission does have the authority to make the final decision on some matters, such as requests for development in the Waterway Overlay Zone (WOZ, which are lands close to the Deschutes River).

Public Hearings

Typically, the Planning Commission meetings consist of public hearings for development within the Water Overlay Zone, Master Planned Developments and Bend Development Code updates.

The meeting agendas are posted to the Planning Commission page a week prior to each meeting and the agenda will contain instructions on how to participate remotely or in person, as well as links to the project files for any applications that are scheduled for hearing. You will also find links for the staff recommendation: <https://www.bendoregon.gov/government/committees/planning-commission>
